

Spring 271

Emperor Aurelian marched with his victorious army east to subjugate Syrian Palmyra. On the way, the Romans cleared Illyricum and Thracia of hostile warrior bands, who were probably mostly CARPI. An encounter with the Goths did take place, but it is unclear whether the enemies were caught before penetrating into the empire or on their return from a plundering expedition, Emperor Aurelian pursued the Goths and won several engagements in their territory north of the Danube. Eventually the Goths suffered a devastating defeat. 5000 warriors & King CANNABAS-CANNABAUDAS were killed. The Gothic danger seemed averted forever.

There was peace for nearly a century. From a position of strength & firm control Emperor Aurelian decided to give up TRAJAN'S DACIA.

271-276

1912 Dates J-BK

Erection of a new wall around Rome including the enlarged imperial city.

Started 271 AD

Completed 276 AD